BEST OF BRITISH SCREENING FOR TRIUMPH DAYTONA

Skidmarx double bubble screen for Triumph Daytona 675

British-made Skidmarx race screens have an unrivalled track record in the Supersport class, having supplied current British Championship winning team (and victors in this year's Isle of Man TT) HM Plant Honda. Now the Dorset-based manufacturer has developed a double bubble screen for the Triumph Daytona 675, widely rated as one of the best machines in the supersport class.

Proven to enhance the aerodynamics of the bike and increase the air pocket behind the screen, giving the rider greater protection from buffeting at high speed, the road version is produced using the same technology as the race screens. No modification is necessary as the Skidmarx double bubble is designed to replace the original factory-fitted item using the existing mounting points and fasteners.

Manufactured by Skidmarx in the UK, the double bubble is a great British accessory for a great British bike. The double bubble retails for £49.95 (including VAT) in a choice of clear, light or dark tints. A range of coloured options can be ordered too (for a £6 surcharge).

Replacement standard screens are also available, in clear, light or dark tints, priced at £39.95. Coloured versions, including red, yellow, bright blue and solid black, sell for £45.95.

Matching headlight protectors sell for £19.95.
